The perhaps natural but rather unexpected result of our last ad was a tremendous, unprecedented rush for those shoes from the greatest shoe-factory in the world.

Men, women and children stood in line awaiting their turn to be served. A crush ensued, but fortunately no lives were lost.

It is no trick at all to sell those shoes. They sell themselves. Come and look at them, and you will see why.

MANUEL ENOS BADLY STABBED TWO WATER SPOUTS VISIT MAUI.

The peaceful and orderly town of Kahului was shocked last Saturday night by the fact that one of the engineers on the Kahului Railroad, Manuel Enos had been stabbed and was in a serious condition. Mr. Enos was a man of good repute and that he was the victim of a stabbing fiend, was a surprise to all who knew him.

It is claimed by those who should know that he and some friends were sitting by the railroad track talking when a man came up and asked whether any one there wished to fight. At this Enos sprang to his feet and was stabbed near the middle of the abdomen, and the knife was drawn over the liver up between the short ribs, making a clean cut about ten inches long, and laying open to view his intestines and liver. He was taken to the Malulani Hospital, where his wound was dressed and sewn up by Dr. R. H. Dinegar, who believes he will recover. Bill Reed, a notorious character, who is best known by his bad qualities was placed under arrest.

Reed is a blacksmith, and spent several months in jail in Honolulu for cutting a man there.

He has been shunned for many months by people who knew his disposition as it was feared he would do just such an act that he is now arrested for.

On Sunday morning two water spouts were seen on the windward side of Maui.

One was near the spot where the ship Spartan was wrecked some months ago. It was unusually large and was of a straight well defined form and very large. The clouds dipped down in the shape of a funnel while the sea lifted up to meet the cloud, and the whirling masses were soon united, forming one of the grandest sights of the torrid zone. The force of the water spout was so great that the sea was lifted high into the air and the boiling mass of water adjacent to it could be seen for many miles distant.

Many residents of Wailuku and Waihee were eye witnesses to the grand sight.

About the same time that the first one was seen in active operation, a cloud between Kahului and Waihee, almost opposite Paukalo, was seen to be dipping down toward the sea, and the sea to rise underneath. In a short time they too were united, forming a beautiful column. David A. Christiansen, head water luna of Waihee and Representative W. J. Coelho were among the favored ones to see the grand sight, but words failed them to express the grandeur of the scene. About this time a whirlwind of unusual violence crossed the sand hills below town, doing some damage, but seemed to decrease in violence as it crossed the isthmus. At the lower end of town, right near the residence of A. G. Dickens, is the three-roomed cottage of Kainea, this was in the direct path of the tornado, was lifted from its foundation and lifted about three feet from it. Kainea was in his chicken house at the time and hearing the roaring of the oncoming wind, ran to the fence and after a hard struggle caught hold of a fence post and succeeded in catching hold of it and held on until the wind passed.

The chicken house, chickens and all was carried off and scattered among the taro-patches. Many of the chickens were killed and others were crippled.

An out building of Lui Kookoo, the home rule politician, was carried away, and being crushed in air was strewn in bits along the route of the whirlwind.

The whirlwind struck the new Knights of Pythias building smashed the show windows of the Maui Wine and Liquor Company as well as some of the bottles of liquor, and added their contents to its store of possessions.

Mr. D. L. Meyer, the manager was in the building at the time, and he says, he made frantic efforts to get out. Dave's explanations were not very clear as to what he did, but they are probably as clear as any one would be able to give when visited by a tornado for the first time.

A short time after the tornado passed by a heavy down pour of rain was experienced in Wailuku, that was one of the heaviest ever known here. It lasted but a few minutes.

DEATH OF M. L. DECKER.

On Sunday morning, M. L. Decker, who had been suffering from cardiac asthma died at his home in Wailuku.

He had been in a critical condition for weeks, and all of his friends realized that death must come soon.

His physicians, Drs. Weddick and Dinegar did everything possible for him, and but for their skill and close attention he would not have lived so long as he did.

The funeral was held at his home, Rev. R. B. Dodge officiating. Many persons from all over Maui attended the funeral and followed the corpse to the grave.

Mr. Decker was well known all over the islands, especially as a horse trainer, and was a familiar figure at the race courses where he always took an active part.

He was born in Pennsylvania about sixty-two years ago and came to California in the early sixties and lived in San Francisco many years.

He came to the islands about fifteen years ago, and soon after to Wailuku, where he made his home ever since.

He was married to Miss Dorcas Richardson, a sister of John Richardson of Lahaina.

He leaves a widow but no children.

The burial took place in the Wailuku Cemetery.

INSPECTS COMPANY I.

Major Van Vliet, commanding officer at Camp McKinley, has been in town for some days inspecting the property at the new Armory, and on Tuesday night inspected Company I.

The Major has recently inspected the company at Hilo and returned Tuesday night to Honolulu.

Company I is composed of young men, most of whom have long work hours, and it requires a great deal of enthusiasm on their part to keep up. The officers and members deserve great credit for the excellent showing made.

GUN CLUBS FOR MAUI.

This weeks paper contains an account of the Kihei Gun Club handicaps. This is a form of sport that is becoming very popular and would be more so on Maui were it better known. It is a sport that any one can participate in and most every one enjoys it. It does not require one to be an athlete either. Even ladies find it entertaining. One of the best shots in the Kihei Club is Mrs. Scott. If there were several gun clubs on Maui they could get together and furnish about as exciting sport as base ball or tennis.

There should be a Club formed at Paia, Puunene, Kahului, Makawao, Wailuku and Lahaina. Will some one who loves out door sport take the lead in each of the places named and organize such a club? Kihei is to be congratulated. Let us form clubs and beat her.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The Congressional Committee has decided to report the seventy-five per cent refund bill for Hawaii favorably for a term of five years.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—Fire has practically destroyed the town of Wrangel, Alaska. The loss will be one hundred thousand dollars and many people rendered destitute.

Wrangel, at the site of old Fort Wrangel, near the mouth of the Stikine river, is one of the centers of the great salmon packing industry of Alaska. The salmon, principally king salmon and humpbacks, begin to run in the river early in June, so that at this season of the year the packers at Wrangel would just be getting ready for the opening of the year's work. This fact would account for the heavy loss and for the number of persons made destitute by the fire. Great numbers of Chinese and Japanese go from San Francisco to Wrangel every year to work in the canneries.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Ambassador White has cabled, from Algieras that the conference has virtually agreed upon the question of the policing of the Morocco frontier.

IRKUTSK, Siberia, March 27.—Armed trains are held in readiness to suppress disorders along the Trans-Siberian railroad.

Evidently, Russia has trouble with the soldiers that have remained in the east since the Japanese war. It has been said repeatedly that Russia has not taken these troops home because she feared that their disbandment would spread disorder in a population already too much inclined to rebellion for the Czar's comfort. This cablegram, which tells more in what it does not say, indicates that the soldiers have not waited to go home to spread disorder. There is no other force in Siberia that would menace the railway line.

BOSTON, Mass., March 27.—Stephen Puter, the missing witness in the Oregon land frauds case, was arrested here, but later made his escape, using a revolver.

S. A. D. Puter, a confessing and convicted land thief, told the officers of the law that he paid United States Senator John Mitchell of Oregon to use his vast influence at the Land Department to secure a patent for land to which Puter admitted that he had no right. On this testimony, with that of letters written by Mitchell to his partner and which were not destroyed as it has been thought that they would be, Mitchell was convicted. Puter ran away, later, and the officers have been searching for him.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The passage of the House resolution curtailing the useless printing of public documents is expected to effect an annual saving of one million dollars.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 26.—The contract has been awarded for the Hawaiian steamer of the new line to run between Honolulu and San Francisco.

VILNA, March 26.—Twenty thousand members of the Orthodox church have become Roman Catholics since religious toleration was granted.

As the Czar is the head of the Orthodox (Greek) church in his empire, the foregoing news may be taken as startling significant. According to Mulhall's statistics the religions of Russia were divided in strength as follows in 1898: Greek, 65,549,000 (out of a total of 80,015,000 for all Europe); Roman Catholic, 8,300,000; Protestant, 2,950,000; Jews, 3,000,000; Mohammedans, 2,600,000; total, 82,399,000. A defection of 20,000 as now reported, for a mere beginning, is truly formidable. There is political significance in the movement from the fact that the Czar's ecclesiastical primacy is one of the strongest influences he has over his subjects. Vilna is the capital of a small province of the same name, with only the other small province of Suwaki between it and the extreme northern border of German p
